It is interesting to apply to our domestic market the reasons given for the cultivation of our foreign trade and to note how during the present period of business stagnation the arguments for one should be applied to the other.

Here, as well as abroad, we have a large population desiring more food and more manufactured articles than they are able to buy. Also we have, unfortunately, an abnormal increase in the number of unemployed who are badly in need of the vast quantities of food supplies and manufactured articles which is reasonable to the country of the country, bave picked up the new which is transforming a cow country which is transforming a cow country which is transforming a cow country into a thriving centre of industry.

There is nothing weak or timid about the robust population here—old or young. For Eastern New York-Showers today; to-morrow fair and much cooler; strong southwest winds.

WASHINGTON, March 20,—Freezure was abnormally high to-night off the Atlantic coast and in the Southeastern States, and high and rising over the northern plain States and the northern Rocky Mountain region. It was low over a narrow belt extending from the great lakes southwestward to the Rio-Grande Valley, and in this belt of low pressure there were two storm centres, one over Lake Huron and the other over western Texas. There was a further rise in temperature in the middle Atlantic and New England States and the lower lake region, and the weather was abnormally warm generally east of the Missinsippi River
